

Frankfort Villa - Jamaica

Frankfort villa was originally a fortified residence dating back to the 17th century, and it has recently undergone a refurbishment transforming this 4 bedroom beachfront villa into one of the most desirable and sought after properties in Jamaica, but keeping the original structures and charm of the bygone plantation era. The secluded 300ft white sand beach in front of the villa is quite an attraction and has been enjoyed by many a well known guest. It is no surprise why the owner chooses this as his winter home.

The accommodation at Frankfort is with the main house and a separate self contained cottage. The main house, which is the old 18th century sugar wharf house with an open-plan, elegantly furnished airy dining / living room downstairs, with beamed ceilings, a satellite TV, VCR, and stereo, plus a state of the art kitchen. The living area opens out on to veranda, stretching the full length of the villa, the ideal place for lazing away the day and then entertaining in the evening.

Upstairs are three comfortably spacious, air-conditioned bedrooms, each with its own bathroom, radio/CD and TV, including a master bedroom with a 42' plasma TV and dressing area.

The additional bedroom is located in another charming house situated steps away from the beach with the background sounds of the of the sea washing over the soft sand. This was the old school house, and is now restored into a self contained 1 bedroom house with a bathroom and bedroom upstairs and a living room downstairs.
